

Introduction to Biological and Cognitive Psychology

Below you will find the deadlines for all assignments in PSYA01. As noted in the syllabus, these deadlines are non-negotiable, and failure to turn assignments in on time will result in no credit for the work in question. You are encouraged to input these dates into your calendar ASAP to avoid missing deadlines.

Note that all times (e.g., 2 PM) are when the assignment is due, so you must be finished by that time (e.g. 2:00:00 PM) to receive credit. The activity will end at exactly that time, no matter how far into it you are. If you have not saved your work, it will be lost. Note that all deadlines are in Toronto time.

Please make sure you have read and understood the “Missed Term Work” and “Technical Issues” sections of your syllabus. You are expected to back up your written assignments in Google Docs as you work on them. If there are any issues, we may ask you to provide your backed-up version of your work, and Google Docs will show timestamps of changes.

Midterm and Final Exam (TBA)

The exact date and time of the midterm and final exams is determined by the Registrar’s Office. We will post the exam times as course announcements as soon as we have the information. The final exam period runs from December 7th to 20th, and you are expected to be available to attend the exam during this entire period, including evenings and Saturdays.

Once the exam dates are released, students with midterm exam conflicts (e.g. conflicting exams) must report the conflict according to the Missed Term Work procedure in the syllabus. Students with final exam conflicts must report them to the Registrar’s Office by their office’s deadlines.
